Copper Care

Keeping your copper sink looking beautiful is easy and in most cases maintenance free. Copper sinks are a unique group of luxury items... they don't require any special treatment! Copper is a metal that changes and evolves with time as it reacts with various elements. You will find that the copper sink will "age" and look even more beautiful as time passes than the first time you see it.

Here we provide you with a few guidelines and suggestions to keep the copper sink looking beautiful for many years to come.

Maintaining Copper

Our Copperhaus kitchen sinks, bathroom sinks and vessel sinks are completed with a patina finish that is 'fired' into the material, giving them a weathered or 'aged' appearance. If you scrub, polish, or use any abrasive or acid-based product on your copper sink, you will damage the patina finish. The key to maintaining copper sinks in perfect condition is all about what you don't do: don't scrub or polish them! Cool, huh?

Here's what you do

Rinse your copper kitchen sink, bathroom sink, vessel sink with water after each use...give it a thorough cleaning with mild soap and a soft cloth from time to time... and, always avoid using anything abrasive on it.

With nothing more than this simple routine of 'rinse and wash', your copper sink or will give you lifetimes of enjoyment!
